Abstract Type and Learner Outcomes

Research - Research proposals should be based on original research which may provide new information regarding myofunctional sciences and related sciences, diagnostic tools and protocols and therapeutic applications. Replication of established studies is welcome, as well as studies with a “negative” outcome, in which correlations were not found. Metastudies and meta-analyses are also welcome. The level of evidence will need to be indicated:

- Single subject design
- Retrospective, non-randomized group design
- Prospective, non-randomized group design
- Prospective, randomized group design

Learning outcomes should be phrased as follows: At the end of this activity, the attendee will be able to:

- Describe the various elements of the study design
- Discuss the authors’ conclusions, the study’s limitations and further improvements
- Identify possible practical application and patient’s benefits

Presentations should apply principles of evidence-based-practice, considering bias, evidence level, objectivity, results/data and specification of the population that could/will benefit from the results.

Presenters are encouraged to prepare their reports and posters considering accessibility of the information by people with diverse learning skills. More information on this subject can be found at:
<http://www.asha.org/CE/for-providers/Accessibility-guidelines/>

Research proposals will be evaluated based on:

- Originality of research question[s]
- Strength of research design
- Strength of research rationale
- Appropriate research methods
- Fulfillment of the goals of the study
- Clinical applicability
- Level of impact of findings on current standard of care
- Overall clarity of proposal

Presentations and posters focusing on clinical work, professional education and general may address novel ideas or applications in diagnostics, therapy, ethical issue, sciences, delivery of care, literature review and any other project in pertinent area. Originality, practical applications, and general interest among the attendees will be critical elements in the selection of the proposals. For both presentation and posters, at least three learning outcomes are required, stated using active verbs that can be measured and observed.

Clinical, Educational and General proposals will be evaluated based on:

- Case history and background information of case studies (usually one subject)
- Originality of research question[s]
- Relevance and actuality of topic
- Quality and quantity of information to be presented on a poster
- Ease of achievement of learner outcomes
- Overall clarity of proposal

General Poster Presentation Tips

Goal of the Poster: Posters should visually guide each viewer through the basics of the study, freeing the author to clarify and discuss essential elements of their work. Poster presentations facilitate the rapid communication of scientific ideas. They combine a verbal presentation with a visual aid [the poster itself]. The opportunity to meet people and interact one on one is one of the major advantages of a poster session. Many times, poster sessions lead to new collaborations among colleagues.

Graphics: Posters are a unique, visual medium, and you only have a few seconds to attract someone's attention. Choose your graphics and images carefully with these goals in mind:

- Use graphics that catch and hold attention
- Increase understanding by communicating information visually, as well as verbally.
- For each graphic image, ask yourself the following:
  - Is it relevant?
  - Does it add information or merely duplicate verbal material?
  - Is redundancy desirable or necessary to reinforce important ideas/concepts?
  - Is the graphic clear and easy to understand?

Preparing and Organizing Your Poster: Review your poster to make sure your presentation covers the information you listed in the abstract.

- Review your poster to make sure it addresses the learner outcomes at the instructional level you indicated.
- Design your poster to address one central question/concept
- State the question/concept clearly in poster, then use your discussion time to expand on issues surrounding on that central question.
- Create a short [one to two minute] take-home message, which summarizes your key points
- Focus on the introduction, methods, results or results-to-date, discussion, summary and publications
- Make sure that your statistics support your conclusions/goals
- Make sure that your research methods are appropriate for your proposed goals.

Rehearsal and Delivery

- Make the flow of information self-explanatory
- Use two to three related background colors [methods, data, interpretation] to unify your poster.
- Use minimal text: short sentences, simple words, or bulleted information.
- Find ways to show what was done [diagrams, schematics, etc.]
- Illustrations should have a prominent headline containing the take-home message in a few words.
- Clearly and accurately present the purpose and result of your study.

Poster Specifications: Poster sessions will take place on Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Fairmont Hotel at various times throughout the day. You need not be present for your poster to be displayed. However your poster will not qualify for CEU. The poster should be approximately 48 inches by 36 inches. Materials may be attached using pushpins or Velcro. Your Disclosure statement must be included with your poster and must be clearly visible on the poster board.

Authors who choose to present their posters: If you choose to come to our convention – will we be happy to have you. As a presenting author, you will be required to register for the AAMS Congress. You will be responsible for arranging your own travel and hotel reservations. Registration will open in August of 2016.

All poster authors must read, understand and agree to adhere to the principles, guidelines, and procedures outlined in the packet provided.

Please remember to sign all of the appropriate paperwork so as not to delay the review of your proposal.
